Nancy Wynne Talks of the Finletter-Damrosch Wedding Which Takes Place Today in Paris—She Tells of Persons at Various Jersey Resorts

TOM FINLETTER and Margaret Damrosch are to be married today in Paris, and naturally are all interested in the great favorite in the east.

Besides she is the daughter of Walter Damrosch, and that in itself is interesting. Tom is a great favorite in the east.

Some persons call Gretchen Damrosch Margaret, but Gretchen seems a far more attractive name and I understand it is the one most used by her friends.

SPEAKING of Grier Bartol being over there reminds me of Marion Bartol, his sister, planned to sail today for some time.

THERE are a great many Philadelphia plans at Bay Head this year, and a number from Wilmington.

I SAW Mrs. Tom Dolan in town yesterday doing some shopping. It's no wonder the Sara has good taste.

CAPE MAY is one gay little place again this summer. Many of the same people who go down each year are there, and the old Red Mill and the movies are everything are going on as before.

THE children and their mother and father had gone to a bungalow in the country, far, far "from the madding crowd."

SOUTH PHILADELPHIA Mr. and Mrs. James Levine have returned from their wedding trip to the Delaware Water Gap, and are now at home at 2603 South Sixteenth street.

NORTH PHILADELPHIA The Rev. William Dyré McCurdy and Mrs. McCurdy, of 1808 North Cape May, are spending some time in Cape May.

FAIR YOUNG ARTIST PROVES REAL MECHANICAL GENIUS

Mary McCloskey Successful Engineer, Advertising Expert and Skilled Dancer

Studying Piano and Interior Decorating So as Not to Waste Any Time

Both artistic and mathematical genius are not often found in one person, especially a woman.

Miss McCloskey lives with her parents at 2224 North Twelfth street and is advertising manager of the Specialty Engineering Co., Allegheny and Trenton avenues.

It was this company that gave her her first "engineering job" several years ago when she wrote to six engineering companies whose names she chose from the telephone directory.

She had been teaching in a South Philadelphia grammar school and giving dancing lessons in the evenings, but she decided she wanted to be an engineer.

Her education had been rather varied and she thought that five diplomas in drawing and a natural ability in mathematics might be assets in engineering.

"I was rather stunned," she confessed, "when he asked me if I ever saw a coal crawler. I hadn't. He thought it about time I knew something about such things, so he told me to design one. You can imagine how I studied pictures and descriptions of such machines. Several times in the next few days I felt so desperate I thought I would give up the job. But I drew the design. It was rather weird, I admit, but it was accepted, modestly, 'with a few changes the company was able to use it."

"I make the drawings and write the copy for the circulars and other advertising matter that goes out. I decide which of our machines shall be sent to national conventions for display. In fact all the money the company appropriates for advertising is put in my hands to spend in the most advantageous way I can plan."

As she talked of conveying machinery, technical engineering problems and selling possibilities, Miss McCloskey sat on the piano bench in her living room, swinging her feet or now and then touching the piano keys lightly with one hand. She is tall and slender, with dark hair parted in the center and combed down over her ears. She fairly radiates youth, enthusiasm and ambition.

MISS MARY McCLOSKEY

Now she is studying the piano, is taking two courses in advertising, and also is studying interior decorating at the School of Industrial Art in addition to her work with the engineering company.

"I have to have my days well planned to get everything in," she said, "but I like to keep busy. And a variety of work is far more restful to me than loading part of each day."

"During the war Miss McCloskey went to the Emergency Fleet at a mechanical engineer in the wood shop department. 'I am finding it fascinating work,' said the versatile young woman. 'So few people understand conveying machinery and it is my business to talk them about it.'"

"I analyze our products so I will know them thoroughly, especially their selling points. I study the field where they will be usable and I find out exactly the amount of profit we make on each machine. I play up different machinery at different seasons. Just now it is corn loaders."

Cox's Chances of Winning the Presidency

While Senator Capper's Topeka Capital (Rep.) considers Republican victory at the polls not even in question, declaring that "after November the Democrats will know that a political party can not carry a presidential election in this country by sprinkling a little booze on its clothes," other Republican papers agree with the New York Tribune that it "would be most foolish if they [Senator Harding's supporters] did not frankly recognize the formidableness of the Cox and Roosevelt ticket." The Chicago Tribune (Rep.) says that the bosses nominated Governor Cox because they thought he was "the best vote-getter and the best goat-getter Democracy had."

If you would obtain a practical idea of Governor Cox's chances of winning the election, as pointed out by newspaper editors of all shades of political opinion, you will do well to read THE LITERARY DIGEST for this week—July 17th. The leading article is a careful summary of American newspaper opinion of the Democratic nominee and the advantages and disadvantages that will be his during the campaign.
